The emergence of the human fungal pathogen Candida albicans as an opportunistic pathogen has led to an urgent need for new drugs, or to optimize the use of the available antifungal drugs. In a study of new drugs, it is very important to know the C. albicans genetic background and its molecular mechanisms for the development of drugs. Here, we describe the real-time polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and the TaqMan® probes for real-time PCR analysis of C. albicans. Candida albicans 18S rRNA or C. albicans gapDH (glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate dehydrogenase) gene was amplified by PCR using specific primers. The 18S rRNA or gapDH gene was amplified by real-time PCR using TaqMan® probes. We can detect the total number of fungal cells, and it was possible to detect the presence of C. albicans by real-time PCR using the TaqMan® probes. This indicates that real-time PCR using TaqMan® probes may be a good method for detecting the presence of C. albicans cells.

SEATTLE (Reuters) - Washington Governor Jay Inslee said on Friday he will order a statewide stay-at-home order if his state does not flatten the coronavirus curve by mid-May. "If we don't have a curve flattening by May 15th, we're going to have to go into an expanded emergency declaration and we're going to have to institute a statewide stay at home order," Inslee said on Friday in an interview with CBS This Morning. The governor's move comes as the governor of New York, Andrew Cuomo, also vowed to extend a stay-at-home order by four weeks and said New York has so far not seen a significant rise in coronavirus cases since the restrictions were first put in place.
